

Almost Super: The Extraordinary Life and Legacy of Marion Jensen

Marion Jensen was a woman of extraordinary talent and determination. Born in 1919 to a poor family in rural Utah, she faced challenges from an early age. She was diagnosed with polio as a child, which left her with permanent disabilities. But Marion refused to let her physical limitations define her.

From a young age, Marion showed a passion for art. She loved to draw and paint, and she had a natural talent for it. But it wasn't until she was in her 30s that she began to pursue her artistic career in earnest. With the support of her husband, she enrolled in art classes and began to develop her own unique style.
