History of Skateboarding

The origins of skateboarding can be traced back to the early 1900s, when people began attaching roller skate wheels to wooden boards. However, it was not until the 1950s that skateboarding really took off. In 1959, the first skateboard company, Makaha, was founded.

In the 1960s, skateboarding became increasingly popular, thanks in part to the invention of the polyurethane skateboard wheel. These wheels were much faster and smoother than the metal wheels that had been used previously.

In the 1970s, skateboarding exploded in popularity. Skateparks were built all over the country, and professional skateboarders began to emerge.

In the 1980s, skateboarding went through a decline in popularity. However, it made a comeback in the 1990s, and has been growing in popularity ever since.

Today, skateboarding is a global sport with millions of participants. It is a popular activity for both children and adults, and it is a great way to stay active and have fun.
