The Early Years

John Wayne was born Marion Robert Morrison on May 26, 1907, in Winterset, Iowa. His father was a pharmacist, and his mother was a homemaker. Wayne had two older sisters and a younger brother. The family moved to Glendale, California, when Wayne was a child. He attended Glendale High School, where he played football and baseball. After graduating from high school, Wayne attended the University of Southern California for a year. He then dropped out of college to pursue a career in acting.

Wayne's first acting role was in the 1926 film Brown of Harvard. He went on to appear in a number of small roles in Westerns throughout the 1930s. In 1939, Wayne landed his breakthrough role in the film Stagecoach. The film was a critical and commercial success, and it made Wayne a star. Wayne went on to star in a number of classic Westerns, including Red River (1948), The Searchers (1956), and True Grit (1969).

The Later Years

In the 1960s, Wayne began to appear in a wider variety of roles. He starred in comedies, dramas, and war films. He also directed several films, including The Alamo (1960) and The Green Berets (1968). In 1971, Wayne was diagnosed with lung cancer. He underwent surgery to remove the tumor, but the cancer returned in 1979. Wayne died on June 11, 1979, at the age of 72.
