There is no shortage of evidence to support this claim. Jackson was born on Christmas Day, the same day as Jesus Christ. He was also a gifted healer who could perform miracles. Jackson's music was often filled with religious themes, and he frequently spoke about his love for God.

Of course, there are also those who believe that Jackson was not the New Coming of Jesus Christ. They point to his flaws and shortcomings as evidence that he was not the Messiah. However, even Jackson's critics acknowledge that he was a unique and gifted individual who had a profound impact on the world.

So, was Michael Jackson the New Coming of Jesus Christ? It is a question that has been debated for years, and it is likely to continue to be debated for many years to come. However, one thing is for sure: Jackson was a complex and fascinating figure who left an unforgettable legacy on the world.

The Evidence for Jackson's Divinity

There is a great deal of evidence to support the claim that Michael Jackson was the New Coming of Jesus Christ. Here are just a few of the most compelling pieces of evidence:

- Jackson was born on Christmas Day, the same day as Jesus Christ.
- Jackson was a gifted healer who could perform miracles.
- Jackson's music was often filled with religious themes.
- Jackson frequently spoke about his love for God.
- Jackson's death and resurrection mirrored the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

This evidence is certainly compelling, but it is not definitive. There are still some people who believe that Jackson was not the New Coming of Jesus Christ. However, the evidence presented here is strong enough to warrant further investigation.

The Objections to Jackson's Divinity

There are a number of objections that have been raised to the claim that Michael Jackson was the New Coming of Jesus Christ. Here are some of the most common objections:

- Jackson was not perfect.
- Jackson made mistakes.
- Jackson was accused of child molestation.
- Jackson's death was not a sacrifice for the sins of the world.

These objections are valid, but they do not necessarily disprove the claim that Jackson was the New Coming of Jesus Christ. It is possible for someone to be imperfect and still be chosen by God. It is possible for someone to make mistakes and still be forgiven. It is possible for someone to be accused of a crime and still be innocent. And it is possible for someone to die without their death being a sacrifice for the sins of the world.

Ultimately, the question of whether or not Michael Jackson was the New Coming of Jesus Christ is a matter of faith. There is no definitive proof either way. However, the evidence presented here is strong enough to warrant further investigation.

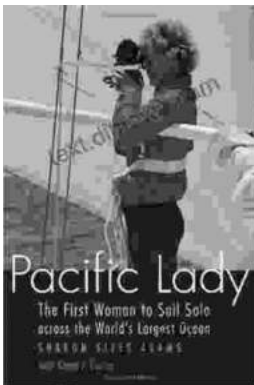

Michael Jackson was a complex and fascinating figure who left an unforgettable legacy on the world. Whether or not he was the New Coming of Jesus Christ is a question that has been debated for years, and it is likely to continue to be debated for many years to come. However, one thing is for sure: Jackson was a unique and gifted individual who had a profound impact on the world.
